Just in time for hot summer reading!

Synergy Press is pleased to announce the publication of 100 Whores, Memories of a John, by 2010 Lambda Award-winning writer Mykola Dementiuk. In Dementiuk's characteristic transgressive fiction he treats us to a voice rarely heard, the voice of a sexually confused young man who visits New York City street whores, hooks up with men and boys in Times Square movie theaters, yet all the while attempts to have normal relationships with men and with women.

The first 100 stories are short, just like the experiences that inspired them. Revealing the inside secrets of picking up a street hooker and what happens after you do, Dementiuk is sparse with words but prolific in his sexual contacts. Following "100 Whores" are five short stories, full of unexpected action, humor, and unforgettable characters. The novella "Christmas Whore" concludes this volume of reality-based fiction with a longer treatment of bisexual angst and queer behavior.

The unusual story lines provide psychologically intense views of a disturbed young man in a not-so-pretty world of poverty, menial work, and sex pick-ups of a strange nature. All the stories take place in New York settings, including Times Square, Midtown, East River Park, and the Lower East Side.
